DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Tsunoda et al (2002/0042308) in view of Ohsumi et al (5,772,531). Regarding claims 1 and 3, Tsunoda discloses a golf ball comprising a core and a cover layer. The core includes six layers. The first layer, equivalent to applicant's inner core, has a modulus of elasticity from 20 to 60 MPa (table 1). The second layer, equivalent to applicant's intermediate layer, has a modulus of elasticity from 25 to 70 MPa. The ratio of the modulus of the inner core to the intermediate core clearly falls within the range from 0.6 to 1.4. The sixth layer, equivalent to applicant's outer layer, has a modulus of elasticity from 120 to 300 MPa, which is higher than the inner core by 70 to 500 MPa. Tsunoda discloses the golf ball is between 20 and 52 mm (see para. 37). However, assuming a standard golf ball the diameter will be 42.7 mm (r_G). The radius of the first layer is between 2.5 and 5 mm (r_1), while the radius of the first layer plus the second layer is between 3.5 and 8 (r_T). Applicant's second equation is satisfied, however the ratio of the inner core to the golf ball is not satisfied because the thickness of the first layer of Tsunoda is too small. However, Ohsumi teaches a golf ball comprising multiple core layer wherein the inner core has a diameter from 6 to 30 mm. Regarding claim 2, the second layer, equivalent to applicant's intermediate layer, has a modulus of elasticity from 25 to 70 MPa and a thickness from 1 to 3 mm. Regarding claim 4, the first layer, equivalent to applicant's inner core, has a modulus of elasticity from 20 to 60 MPa (table 1). The second layer, equivalent to applicant's intermediate layer, has a modulus of elasticity from 25 to 70 MPa. The sixth layer, equivalent to applicant's outer layer, has a modulus of elasticity from 120 to 300 MPa. One of ordinary skill in the art would have modified Tsunoda with Ohsumi to achieve the desired properties.
